22. Best Practices adopted by our Institute:

Today, colleges and universities have a great deal to gain when it comes to the installation of solar panels. Ideal for reducing energy bills and cutting costs associated with powering an institute's facilities, solar panels are an eco-friendly addition that can also have wide-reaching social and cultural impacts. Electric prices have risen over the past ten years. Because they use a great deal of electricity, schools and universities have been some of the primary victims of these price hikes. Fortunately, solar power is a free source of energy, found in abundance throughout the world, and advanced technology and skilled installers have made it even more accessible for institutions. As a good practice, our institute SJPI-NICM has set a benchmark by installing Solar Roof Top System (100 KW) with an initial cost of Rs. 45,67,250.

We believe that unless people have the opportunity to see solar panels at work, they can feel relatively strange and alien. Luckily, students, faculty, and visitors who come into contact with solar panels at our institute have the opportunity to learn how the arrays work. This helps familiarize people with the panels and, hopefully, inspire them to opt for solar energy on their own accords.

Sanitary Pad Incinerators (3 numbers) are installed at Main and Girls Hostel Buildings for girl students and female staff members.

A new Mess building for the use of the students and staff is under construction work.
